Public Sector Companies (PSCs) have an enhanced accountability to the public at large along with ensuring the efficient running of their companies. Consequently, directors of such companies are expected to possess a good understanding of the specific context within which the PSC operates, including its operations and environment, awareness of its values and standards of probity and accountability as well as their duties as directors.

The Securities and Exchange Commission of Pakistan (SECP) has advised PSCs to ensure that directors are well conversant with corporate laws and practices and Board members are acquainted with the wider scope of responsibilities concerning the use of public resources, to act in good faith and in the best interests of the PSC.
